

KAVALAH

Walled Seaport for Seres, Commercial Center of Northeast Macedonia.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Kavala, the walled Aegean seaport for Seres, the commercial center of northeast Macedonia, is the subject of today's war geography bulletin prepared by the National Geographic Society at its Washington headquarters.

Concerning this historically interesting town of 5,000 people which is situated on the mainland across the Bay of Kavala from the island of Thasos, and which is connected by rail with Salonika, the bulletin says: "The ships which frequent Kavala for cargoes of the finest Turkish tobacco in the world approach the docks from both the east and west for the town is built on a promontory which juts southward into the bay. The port is eighty miles in an air line northeast of Salonika and is about 250 miles west of Constantinople. In the summertime its population is more than doubled by the influx of peasants who find employment in curing and packing the tobacco for which America and Europe paid more than $6,000,000 annually before the war.

Place Is Secure.

"Whatever may be its role in the present encroachment of the Bulgarians on Grecian territory, Kavala's place in modern history is secure as the birthplace of Mehmet Ali, the remarkable son of an Albanian farmer whose career as viceroy of Egypt during the first half of the nineteenth century almost precipitated Europe into a war of nations such as is now being fought on battlefields throughout the world. The house in which this witty, wily pasha was born in 1769 is in a narrow, crooked street not far from the Turkish school which he founded, although he himself never learned to read or write.

"It was during Mehmet Ali's activities, from 1830 to 1841, as a rebel vassal of the Ottoman sultan, that Russia, Turkey, Austria, England and France were kept on the verge of war in their determination to prevent a disturbance of the 'balance of power' on the continent. During this perilous period the ambitious pasha, who had made himself master of Egypt by a massacre of the Mamelukes, was the crux of the Egyptian question, and his callings to overlordship of Syria, where his son, Ibrahim, was constantly operating with a well trained army, gave rise to international complications which for a decade taxed the diplomatic resources of Metternich, Palmerston, Thiers, Ponsonby and Guizot.

Known Once as Neapolis. "In Roman days Kavala was known as Neapolis, and it was here that St. Paul landed on his way from Samothrace to Philippi, where there was a thriving colony of Christians to whom the Epistle to the Philippians was addressed. Prior to the beginning of the Christian era Neapolis was the seaport of Philippi, whose ruins are to be found some ten miles from shore, on the highway from Kavala to Thessaly. Here the fleet of Brutus and Cassius was at anchor during the famous conflict on the field of Philippi in 42 B. C., when the assassins of Julius Caesar met defeat at the hands of the legions commanded by Antony and Octavius.

"Philippi was named for Philip II of Macedonia, father of Alexander the Great, and was originally known as (Crenides (Fountain). It owed its importance to the proximity of the hill of Dionysius, where Philip had made himself master of valuable gold mines. "Practically all that remains to connect ancient Neapolis with modern Kavala is a Roman aqueduct whose two-tier arches still convey water from Mt. Pangaea to the town and citadel."
